Star Analytics Announces Change of CEO Founder to Focus on Strategic Role

Palo Alto, CA, March 21, 2007: Star Analytics, Inc. today announced that Founder and former CEO Quinlan Eddy has moved into a new strategic role to help guide the company's future product and market strategy. The company's Chief Operating Officer, Trevor Hughes, has assumed the role of President and CEO, effective immediately.

In his new position as Chief Strategy Officer, Quinlan Eddy is now responsible for long-term product visioning, market strategy, strategic alliances and sales. "In this new role I will be better able to guide the company's long term direction by focusing on the products which our customers want and need, and by getting our message out to the market," he said.

As new President and CEO, Trevor Hughes said, "Quinlan has done an outstanding job of creating and managing Star Analytics to become a successful company with a valuable, high-quality product and many satisfied customers. We are both excited to have him take on this new role to help the company move to the next stage of its growth."
